

The INN

International Neighborhood Network

By the Numbers

- The UN says international migration surged 49% since 2000
- About 19% of the world's migrants come to the US
- According to US census data, the number of immigrants in the US is at an all-time high, notable for a nation built on immigration

Welcoming the World

Fulfilling the Great Commission has traditionally meant living in another country, learning a new language and culture, and overcoming being the outsider as you make relationships for sharing the gospel.

Today the nations are coming to our doorstep. The diaspora (people who have moved from their homeland) may already speak English and want help learning more. They need help with logistics, learning our cultural norms, and settling their families into our communities. Often they are more open-minded and willing to learn about our faith and beliefs.

There are countless opportunities for workers in America to love and serve our new neighbors. What is needed are open eyes, a servant heart, and the courage to engage with people who at first seem very different.

International Neighborhood Network

World Team has hundreds of years' experience and expertise in sending and supporting cross-cultural missionaries to plant churches among unreached peoples around the world. In response to the need and opportunity to reach the US diaspora community, World Team is applying its expertise here in the US.

The Age of Migration

The number of people on the move internationally is greater than ever before. We live in the age of migration.

You've probably seen evidence of America's changing face in your own city or neighborhood. Many people are coming from parts of the world least reached by the gospel, representing over eighty different unreached people groups.

Our neighborhoods are becoming home to the very people missionaries are working to reach around the world. What an opportunity we have to welcome them in the name of Jesus!

Holistic Church Planting

The International Neighborhood Network (The INN) is currently based in a growing number of US cities with a goal of reaching diaspora communities. World Team workers are placed in each city and work with networks of local churches to coordinate evangelism, discipleship, and church-planting efforts.

Each team evaluates best ministry practices for serving the needs of their particular community in collaboration with local efforts. This may include things like English language services, help getting started in a new country, or navigating other logistical issues. These holistic efforts are rooted in our commitment to sharing the gospel in word and deed so that the lost may be saved and participate in the body of Christ.
